STATE BENEFITS

State Benefits are sums of money paid by the Government to people in certain circumstances to meet their day to day living needs. They exist to make sure no one falls below a minimum standard of living.

State Benefits are also sometimes called allowances, pensions, tax credits or entitlements.

There are many different benefits that can be claimed. If you have been told in the past that you don't qualify for benefits it is worth checking again. You can have capital (savings and property) adding up to £16,000 and still qualify for some benefits.

It is important to get advice from an advice centre, such as Citizens Advice, to be sure that you are claiming every benefit that you are entitled to. Their national website is: www.citizensadvice.org.uk/benefits and the local centre websites (who offer appointments) can be found in the directory (section 6) to this guide.

You should be careful about relying on benefits to protect against financial hardship. This is because:

- You can't be sure you will be entitled to get benefits at the time you need them.
- Benefits are fairly low, and might not pay you enough to cover the costs you face.
- In some cases, you have to wait before you can get help. For example, most people of working age have to wait for 5 weeks before they can get their first Universal Credit payment.
